Hope Trounces Heavier Camden Team by 14 to 0

Bobcats Turn Out Smooth Job, With 2,000 Looking On

Brown and Payne Carry the Ball Behind Perfect Interference

2 TALLIES, SAFETY

Hope Keeps the Ball Deep in Panther Territory for 3 Quarters

A carefully-coached Hope team cut to pieces a heavier Camden squad on the local field Friday night and eliminated the gold-and-black eleven from this year's championship play, 14 to 0.

It was a greater triumph for Coach Foy Hammons' Bobcats than the score indicated.

The greatest crowd in Hope football history packed the new stadium, despite a wet field and threatening weather. Attendance was estimated at capacity, 2,000.

Hope went down the field and across Camden's goal-line for a safety in the first few minutes of play—and the game was deep into Camden's territory all the way except the third quarter, when the visitors made their only threat.

Payne, Hope's elusive halfback, went over for touchdowns in the second and fourth quarters; and skittered left end for 25 yards to put the ball nearly on Camden's goal-line again just as the final gun sounded.

Brown, quarterback, ripped off repeated long runs in midfield to keep the Bobcats forever close to the visitors' goal.

Facing certain defeat as the fourth quarter wore on, the Panthers resorted to long passes and frantic line plays. They made good three passes during the game, while Hope made none. Hope ignored the aerial play as an offense, and had good luck breaking up the visitors' passing game.

The teams were even on first downs, eight apiece; but Camden suffered from disastrous fumbles, and Hope followed the breaks with eagle eye and sure fingers.

Hope Kicks Off

Hope kicked off. Camden earned first downs—then Brown intercepted a pass, and on the next play Payne went around right end for 20 yards. Brown made no gain. Payne advanced two yards. Brown advanced four yards to Camden's 7-yard line—but the Panthers held, and Hope lost the ball on downs.

The Panthers lined up to punt from behind their own goal-line, but Richards blocked the kick. Hope was a second late getting on the ball, and a Camden player covered it for a safety. Score: Hope 2, Camden 0.

Camden kicked to Hope's 41-yard line. Hope tried a pass, incomplete, and kicked to Camden's 35-yard marker. Camden made first down and the ball was on their own 45-yard line.

Hope held, and Camden kicked. Kennedy blocked it, but Camden recovered the ball on their own 40-yard line, but lost it on downs on their own 48-yard line. Hope's ball. Speedy made one try, no gain, and Hope kicked.

The first quarter ended with Hope kicking to Camden's 25 yard-line, and a 5-yard penalty for Hope, offside on the closing play.

Second Quarter

Camden lost a yard on the first two plays, after changing goals, was penalized five yards for delay, and kicked.

Hope's ball on their own 35-yard line. Brown fumbled but Hamilton recovered. Brown picked up four yards on a fake kick. Hope then kicked to Camden's 31-yard line.

Camden fumbled and Hitchcock recovered for Hope on Camden's 26-yard line.

A touchdown was in prospect. Payne ripped off five yards. Brown made first down—but Camden held on its 10-yard line, and Hope lost the ball.

Camden kicked out to Hope's 46-yard. Payne picked up nine yards, and Payne kicked.

Camden quickly punted, and it was Hope's ball on their own 41-yard line. Brown made a rousing run of 45 yards to Camden's 14-yard line. Payne earned a yard off left end, and three yards off right tackle, putting the ball on Camden's 10-yard line.

Payne went over for a touchdown. The kick was lost. Score: Hope 8, Camden 0.

Third Quarter

Hope kicked off, and it was Camden's ball on their own 20-yard line. Camden punted out.

Training School Will Open Sunday

Promotion Day to Be Observed at First Baptist Church

Sunday will be promotion day at First Baptist church, and will also see the beginning of a Sunday school training school and an enlargement campaign which will last throughout the week.

The Sunday school will meet at 9:45 in their regular departmental assembly rooms, and will spend a part of the hour there in making necessary reports. Following this the whole Sunday school will gather in the auditorium of the church and witness the installation of the newly elected officers and teachers.

Arthur Erwin, the new superintendent of the whole school, will relieve Lee Garland, retiring superintendent, of his duties and will then introduce the new departmental superintendents. They are:

Mrs. Hugh Smith, adult; Mrs. W. B. Mason, young people; Mrs. A. C. Kolb, intermediate; Mrs. Henry Haynes, junior; Mrs. M. S. Bates, primary; Mrs. Joe Coleman, beginners; Mrs. Ben Smith, cradle roll; Mrs. Allene Johnson, general secretary; Miss Lillie Middlebrooks, general treasurer.

After the installation service the pastor will preach, using the subject, "Beauty and the Sordid." In the afternoon the census workers from most of the churches in the city will canvass Hope for information concerning the church affiliations of the white population. These workers will be under the direction of J. P. Edmunds, state secretary of religious education for the Baptist State Convention.

Legenza and Mais Shoot Way to Freedom—Kill 1, Wound 2

RUSE SUCCESSFUL

On Way to Conference With Attorney They Suddenly Draw Guns

RICHMOND, Va.—(AP)—Walter Legenza and Robert Mais, members of a notorious tri-state gang under sentence of death for murder, escaped from the Richmond city jail Saturday after critically wounding a guard and two jail attaches.

The two criminals had been brought from their cells to confer with an attorney on an appeal.

They drew pistols on the guards and broke through the reception room, firing as they went.

The gangsters commandeered a mail truck and drove away, subsequently abandoning the truck.

Officers are searching for the pair.

NRA Guarantees No Radical Move

Richberg Assures There Will Be No More Sweeping Changes

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Administration assurances that "sweeping changes by sudden fiat will be discouraged" went out to business Friday from the new multiple-headed Blue Eagle administration.

This word came directly from Donald R. Richberg, lawyer who helped mold NRA policies in their infancy, and who now directs an administration committee specially created to advise Mr. Roosevelt on NRA and other recovery policies.

Simultaneously, C. I. Williams, wealthy 50-year-old industrialist, was chosen to head the National Recovery Board now vested with all the business-hoarding powers once wielded by Hugh S. Johnson.

Over both groups—policy making and executive—Mr. Roosevelt tightened reins of personal supervision in guiding NRA toward next winter's legislative gantlet.

Richberg's assurance to industry that no sudden upheavals need be expected was given at a crowded press conference called, he said, to avoid "misunderstanding and misinterpretation" of the relationship between his Emergency Industrial Committee and the new NRA board.

Dizzy Dean Hurls St. Louis Into Tie for National Flag

Both Cards and Giants Have Two More Games to Play

BLANK CINCINNATI

Cards Play Them Twice Again, While Giants Meet Brooklyn

ST. LOUIS.—(AP)—Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean, who has backed up his superb confidence by doing practically everything one man could for the Cardinals, pitched the St. Louis Club right into a tie with the idle New York Giants for the National League lead with a 4-to-0 shutout of the Cincinnati Reds Friday.

Fighting with only two days of rest, Dean made the Reds look like the dizzy ones as he limited them to six hits and struck out one for every blow. His victory was his 20th of the season, against seven defeats, and his sixth shutout. He received able backing from his teammates in 23 well placed hits off Benny Frey and Allyn Stout.

St. Louis has two more games against the Reds and Manager Frank Frisch plans to keep tossing Deans at the tail enders until they are ready to cry quits. Paul Dean, Dizzy's younger brother, is slated for mound duty Saturday and if that doesn't put the Cards ahead, Jerome will try it again Sunday.

Only Four Reach Second

So effectively did the elder Dean pitch that only four Cincinnati runners got as far as second base and the Reds never got two hits in any one inning. Jim Bottomly got to second on a single and a sacrifice, Gordo Slade reached the same spot in the same way in the fourth; Adam Comorosky doubled to start the eighth and got no farther when Dizzy retired three men in short order, Harlin Pool hit a double with two out in the ninth.

Frey was the victim of all the Cardinals scoring in three big innings in which Joe (Ducky) Medwick and Captain Leo Durocher led the attack. Medwick made three hits, including a triple that accounted for the first run and he and Durocher each drove in two runs.

Frisch Scores

Manager Frank Frisch set the style for his club when he doubled after two were out in the third and scored when Medwick claimed his three bagger down the right field foul line.

Bill Delaney opened the fourth inning with a single and Ernie Ostrat doubled, moving him along to third. Durocher came through with a timely single to score his two mates but the Cards lost an opportunity for further scoring when Pepper Martin and Frisch flied out after Dean had sacrificed. Rothrock drew the only walk of the game between these two outs.

The final run game in the seventh when Martin, first up, beat out a roller to Second Baseman Kamporis for a hit. Rothrock and Frisch went down on infield grounders, Martin advancing a base each time. Medwick singled to score Martin with the last run.

Despite the Cards' great rush into a contending position, St. Louis fans still failed to show much interest in the contest. The attendance, held down somewhat by threatening weather, was officially announced as 6,500.

Cattle Purchases Will Be Resumed

Federal Government Is Forwarding New Purchase Orders

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The federal government's cattle purchasing program in Arkansas will be resumed soon, T. Roy Reid, state drought relief director and assistant director in charge of the Agricultural Extension Service, was advised Friday in a telegram from Col. Phillips Murphy, director of the National Drought Relief Service in Washington.

Additional cattle purchase orders are being forwarded through Harry Petrie, director of the regional drought relief office at Denver, Col. Mr. Reid was informed, but a subsequent telephone conversation Mr. Petrie said he had not received the purchase orders for transmission to Arkansas drought relief authorities.

No quotas were given, nor was the length of time for continuance of the cattle purchasing program in emergency drought relief counties indicated in the telegram to Mr. Reid.

Certificate Sale Is Again Outlined

Cotton Exemptions May Be Bartered If Recorded With Frank Hill

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Liquidation of the Farm Administration's cotton producers' pool was ready to begin Saturday, following out the allocation of 20 million dollars to carry out the final details of selling the cotton or making new loans.

Officials have approved liquidation and during the coming weeks forms will be sent to the holders of cotton in the pool to sell it or take advantage of the new 12-cents per pound loan—an advance of 2 cents per pound over 1933.

Certificate Sale

The procedure for selling surplus tax-exemption cotton certificates was announced here Saturday by Frank J. Hill, assistant in the cotton adjustment program being carried on in Hempstead county.

Local sales and the procedure as outlined by Mr. Hill are:

"Any producer holding such surplus certificate or certificates may sell, barter, exchange, or assign to any other cotton producer situated within the county where the certificates were originally issued at the price fixed under section 104 of these cotton regulations which is 4 cents per lint pound.

"In such case the statement prescribed in section 102 shall be executed and filed with the appropriate office here.

"Both the owner of the surplus tax-exemption certificates and the person desiring to buy same come to the county agent's office before the transfer can be made.

"Ginners in this county are again urged not to accept any detached portion or portions of tax-exemption certificates."

Arkansas has not been in a position to make contributions toward matching federal funds, Governor Futrell said.

Special Panel in Bronx Court to Be Asked Wednesday

District Attorney Foley Pushing New York Extortion Case

TRIAL TO BE EARLY

Kloppenburg, Hauptmann's Closest Friend, Again Examined

NEW YORK.—(AP)—District Attorney Samuel J. Foley said Saturday that early next week three psychiatrists, one appointed by the district attorney's office, one by the State of New Jersey, and one by the defense, will examine Bruno Richard Hauptmann, indicted for extortion in the Lindbergh kidnap case.

A Early Trial

NEW YORK.—(AP)—District Attorney Samuel J. Foley said Saturday that next Wednesday he will submit a motion in Bronx county court for a special jury panel in order to get under way as quickly as possible the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, indicted for extortion as the receiver of the Lindbergh $50,000 ransom payment.

The actual date of the trial will be determined at a conference between the prosecutor and defense counsel.

Foley did not indicate what date he expected the case here to go to trial, but said he would make the motion for the special panel order to accelerate preparations for the trial.

Hans Kloppenburg, who was questioned by members of the district attorney's staff for several hours Friday, was recalled for further questioning Saturday.

Foley said Kloppenburg was a close friend of Hauptmann, and "because he was closer to Hauptmann than anyone yet produced we are questioning him at great length."

Long Men Accused of Buying Votes

Information Filed Against 4 State Workers at New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS.—(AP)—The office of District Attorney Eugene Stanley Friday delivered a blow to the state political organization of Senator Huey P. Long and Gov. O. K. Allen by filing bills of information in criminal district court against four state employees charging fraud in the September 11 Democratic primary when the Long candidates were swept into office in the New Orleans congressional districts over those of his political foe, Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley.

The bills of complaint charged that on election day the accused dockworkers gave $500 to Robert G. Hamilton, reputedly a member of the government transient office here, with which to purchase votes of persons who were not registered to vote and who did not possess qualification papers.

It was alleged that the votes were chased in the Second ward at $1 a vote and that eight of 10 persons named in the bills voted twice in the Second ward on fraudulent papers, once in the Third precinct and once in the Fourth precinct.

It was alleged that the votes were given for $1 apiece for the Long candidates in New Orleans against the candidates sponsored by the Old Regular political organization of Walmsley.

Those against whom the bills of information were filed were: Edward Burke, superintendent of the Board of Control of the New Basin.

Your Health

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Prostate Gland May Harm Men Over 50

There is a small organ, lying beneath the front end of the bladder, that means little if anything to man, but that can give him considerable trouble.

This is the prostate gland. It tends to enlarge in many men after the age of 50 and disturbs the functions of the bladder. About 35 per cent of men over 60 have enlargement of this gland and at least half of these are troubled by it.

Chief difficulty is that the enlargement interferes with excretion of fluid from the bladder. As a result of the delay in excretion, there are many symptoms which are irritating and some which may be dangerous to life.

One symptom is an increased frequency of excretion of fluid, especially during the night and toward morning. There may be hesitation and difficulty in the attempt to get rid of the water from the body.

As a result, afflicted persons may strain a good deal, which tends to increase the irritation and the trouble. The fluid remaining easily becomes infected and the strain upon the tissues may result in chronic inflammation.

Neglect of this condition may result in absorption of poisonous substances into the body, so that there is a breakdown in general health.

The doctor makes his diagnosis by direct examination of the tissues, as well as by the symptoms. He can pass a tube into the bladder and in that way not only relieve the accumulation of fluid, but also aid his diagnosis by examination of the fluid itself.

There are many hygienic measures which will help those who are afflicted to overcome the condition and to avoid serious symptoms. Congestion and swelling of the gland may be lessened by avoiding exposure to cold and wet, by avoiding physical over-exertion and, above all, by being moderate in all things.

Overeating, overindulgence in alcohol, or overindulgence in sexual activities is bound to be harmful. Since the accumulation of fluid and the difficulty of getting rid of it is one of the most serious symptoms, the amount of fluids taken into the body must be controlled. The desire to get rid of fluid should always be heeded carefully.

The man who has this condition is frequently a prey to all sorts of quack treatments. He tries heat, manipulation, electrical methods, and similar procedures which sometimes are far more harmful than letting the condition alone.

Only a direct examination will reveal the actual extent of the swelling. Only scientific, clean handling will mean safety from infection.

Once the condition is diagnosed, there are numerous safe medical methods for relief. Moreover, modern medical and electro-surgical methods have been developed which are safe in the majority of cases, if the patient is seen early and if he is not too old at the time when treatment is undertaken.

Chief Judge Learns Slayer Is His Son
—This Novel Has Improbable But Exciting Climax

By BRUCE CATTION

When melodrama is paced properly, it gives the reader a feeling of suspense that no other kind of fiction can provide.

A good example is "Seed of Adam," an exciting novel by Violet Campbell. Here we have a tale which—for all its "purple" writing and its improbably twist of plot—is an exciting story that works steadily up to a climax and carries the reader right along with it.

The background is an upper-class English house; set; respected old people; lovely daughters; struggling, fiery, horrid, dashing soldier from India on leave, and so on. The young women are charming, the young men are handsome, and the judge is one of those almost unaccountably upright and judicial old men whom American readers to believe have no equals.

Against this background, a romance of enormous young barbarians is set, and that particularly

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Americans Should Sing More to Be Happy

"Si-i-i-ing-ing in the Rain?" The little song that caught America by the ears not so long ago. That neat little, sweet little, fleet little song that had a tune one could remember.

What a pity such catchy tunes die to make room for "hot" songs, "blues" songs, and the eternal croons about lost loves and frigid ladies!

True I am no young lover or sentimental high school girl. But neither am I in my dotage. It doesn't strike the promoters that people might care for tunes and words that are neither hot, blue, moss-grown, or silly. Tunes light, happy, lily and brave. Like "Sing in the Rain."

But this is not what I started to talk about.

What I mean—we need more singing. Not more and more and more tunes, but more singing.

Those Who Sing. Who sings any more? Oh, yes, the children sing in school and we sing in church. After the third drink almost any party gets either choral or chorale. It is singing at home and at work and at play that we are starving ourselves for—singing in the rain of everyday life.

People used to do it but it's gone out with the lullaby. Like the lullabies of today, we leave it to the radio or the concert stage or the show. We, as a people, do not sing. It is part of the Nordic temperament to make our music a business, or let us concede "art," but never mere sheer joy.

To get a bit preachy and go into reasons, let's see why singing is a good thing.

It is the greatest emotional balancer under the sun. No one can stay mad who sings—no one can nurse a grudge, or hug a jealousy, or harbor any sort of emotional poison at the moment a song is on his lips.

They say that such things evaporate out under the sky. We "walk" off some disturbing passion. But we can "sing" it off, too.

Who Will Compile List? One trouble is that nobody learns words any more. We think, "What's the use? Tomorrow it will be gone."

The chief value of folk songs in any country is that everybody sings them, alone and in groups. We wouldn't stand for "folk songs" as we know them, but I wish someone would list about twenty good tunes with words not too sensible, but not too silly—bright, wearable, lovely songs that whole families could learn and sing. And that would stay in style until next week.

And incidentally nothing acts so quickly as both a sweetener and a yeast as mother singing as she works.

horrible brand of insanity which results in "Jack the Ripper" crimes. He does in a housemaid, gets caught, and is tried before the night of judgment, with the strange young bar-biter to defend him.

Comes now our melodrama, in the middle of the trial, the pulse increases that the criminal is his own son, product of an encounter with a light-of-love back in his innocent days.

What this does to the plot, and to the plot, can be imagined. It turns the yarn an improbable twist but it also makes it highly exciting.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLV

VERONICA KERRIGAN twitched a fresh pillow-slip in place and glanced down the hall in the direction of the hospital room from whose open doors echoed gusts of merriment. Young Mr. Van Seiver's wheel chair was established there, check by jowl with the Boston ferns and the old lady in 316, who was convalescing from a gall bladder operation and who enjoyed a good story when she heard one.

Veronica was on duty days now, taking care of Mr. Van Seiver. His day nurse, Elsie Goff, had been called home by the illness of her father—presumably, Veronica thought. She had never had a patient she liked so much as Mr. Van Seiver. Good-looking, rich, considerate, a perfect gentleman, she said to herself, if ever there was one.

Just why that fiancée of his, that blond girl from Larchmont, didn't sing for joy because she'd been so lucky as to snag him Veronica simply did not understand. She herself got down every night on her knees and prayed to St. Joseph to find her a good husband. She had a small mental image of the saint strung around her neck this very moment, on a thin silver chain. And all she'd ever got for it (up to date) was the attention of Will Schultz, who ran a garage in New Martin and wasn't half bad if you overlooked his grimy finger-nails.

Miss Raburn (if you asked Miss Kerrigan about it, although nobody would) was pretty keen on that dark chap who ran her up to the hospital in his rattly little roadster. Mr. Van Seiver had a lean, lean greyhound of a car. Maybe Will wouldn't like to get his fingers on it, some day! She'd told him about it and he'd been interested. It was about all he ever was interested in—gadgets and differentials and spark plugs and such stuff! Hardly ever read a book and didn't know Joan Crawford from Norma Shearer. Miss Kerrigan harbored the secret conviction that she, herself, was a direct continuation of the two. She and Mr. Van Seiver talked about movies a lot. He liked so many of the pictures she did. Wasn't that funny?

He'd be going home soon and she'd miss him. His chauffeur had driven up that very afternoon in the long car and taken away the music box and about a ton of personal equipment his mother had sent up before she left for Florida. Miss Kerrigan sighed, considering an existence in which town houses, foreign motors and hampers from Rick's figured largely. How nice it must be to be rich! Not that she liked Mr. Van Seiver because of his money—far from it. If he hadn't a penny he'd still be the dearest boy in the world.

SHE flushed because the floor head, standing in the doorway and smiling indulgently, seemed to be reading her very thoughts. The Head was a sculptured beauty who had no use for men at all, although she had been known to waste 15 minutes chatting to Edward Van Seiver when there were no temperatures to take, nor patients' families to smooth down.

"Your patient wants to come back," she said.

Miss Kerrigan fairly flew down the hall. Edward was walking now, slowly and with difficulty. He had a cane but it was little Miss Kerrigan who peeped prettily underneath his arm of the left side. It was Miss Kerrigan who steered him over the worn place in the matting.

"You did that beautifully, just bee-yoo-tifully," she caroled.

"Oh, I'm getting there all right, all right."

Her heart went pit-a-pat when he looked down at her like that.

"What's for supper?"

She handed him the menu. New Martin Hospital was proud of its methods. As up to date—more so—it was proud of saying, than any of the city institutions.

Edward frowned, contemplating the list. "Same old groceries," he said. "Roast lamb. Roast beef. Chicken fricassees."

"There are lamb chops, too," urged Miss Kerrigan in a maternal, coaxing voice. "If they're not sizing him I'll pep yours up in the diet kitchen."

"Will you do that?" He gave her hand with his firm, competent fingers, a little squeeze. "There's a good girl."

As she fluttered down the hall she treasured the thought of that impulsive little gesture. Probably it didn't mean a thing, though. He was just a great big kid, . . .

When Boots came the next night she was alone. Denis hadn't telephoned. She had come down on the bus.

She saw the instant she met Edward's eyes that she needn't tell him. He had the papers strewn all over his bed. He grinned broadly.

"Some luck, eh? Some fun?"

"Isn't it too marvelous?" She leaned over his shoulder, staring down at the picture of her mother above the headline.

"Suburban Matron Wins Prize in Charity Sweepstakes."

"Never got such a kick out of anything in my life," he told her. "That brought the papers up with supper and you could have knocked me over with a broom when I read the news. I've been rooting for your mother ever since."

Miss Kerrigan, looking in on her neat white shoes with their discreet rubber heels, gave Boots a frosty smile. She, too, had read the story. Some folks have everything, she told herself, indignantly. . . .

"Did Denny call you?"

Boots felt her heart beat faster at the mention of his name. "No he didn't. Why?"

"Oh, he's got sand in his shoe again, wants to light out. This time it's to be a tramp steamer for the West Indies or some place. He ran in at noontime. He's packing his stuff. Says he's gone stale and can't write."

There was a lump of ice where Boots' heart had been. She managed to say naturally enough, "I guess he never stays in one place for long. But how about Kay Chilmington? I thought he was waiting around for her to come back?"

"Oh, that's all off—has been for weeks," Edward told her. "They hadn't been hitting it off so well when she left and she'd written him a lot of sour letters. Denny said they'd about decided to call it a day. She's marrying some dusty old member of parliament or something. Lady Switz-Bang." He chuckled.

SO all the time she had chafed him about Kay he'd known this and hadn't told her. Why?

Edward touched her face lightly with a well-manicured forefinger. "We'll miss the old kid, won't we? He's a good guy."

"Oh, terribly!" She tried to be casual but the effort did not come off as well as she'd planned.

"Well, what about the folks—have they made any plans? I suppose they're all of a dither?"

Boots smiled, remembering. "Mother is. She says she's going to rent the house for whatever she can get and pack off to California. She has a cousin in Palo Alto. She's already written to ask them about finding her a small house. Miss Florida may go with them. Father's attitude is funny. He's never thought Mother had any business sense and of course this is a freak thing but he is treating her with the greatest respect. She's the wizard of the family now. They've been simply wild, though, with newsreel people and tabloid photographers swarming all over the place."

"Fun!" Edward gloated, grinning.

"Well, it's all right for a while," she conceded, "but I'll be glad when things settle back to normal."

"Then you and I start out on our travels . . ."

"Yes," She looked at him with an odd pathos.

"You're walking well now, Edward?" Miss Houghton said you'd be leaving this week."

"Yep. Got the old pep back."

"Well, then . . ."

"We may as well go ahead with our plans . . ."

"Sure you want to now?"

She stared at him, frankly puzzled. "Why, Edward, what do you mean?"

His big laugh was tinged with embarrassment. "I thought maybe you wouldn't want to string along with me now."

"Nonsense." She couldn't accept this loophole, just when he was hapless and needed her.

On the threshold Miss Veronica Kerrigan, listening, froze to attention.

Pelicans Defeat Galveston 9 to 2

Southern League Champs Take Lead in Dixie Series

GALVESTON, Texas.—(AP)—The New Orleans Pelicans took a long step forward in their fight to retain the long-ball championship of Dixie by overwhelming the Galveston Buccaneers, 9 to 2, behind the steady pitching of Denny Galehouse here Friday night. The victory was the Pel's second in the first three games of the Dixie series with all the remaining contests to be played in daylight at New Orleans. The Texas League champions would have to capture three out of four in their opponents' home park.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

Guard Against Drying of Skin By Fall Winds

These brisk autumn days, beautiful though they are and certainly excellent for the spirits, can play havoc with a complexion that has a tendency toward dryness. If your skin comes in this category, tell yourself again that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, get a jar of tissue cream and plan to do a nightly beauty routine that will eliminate the dry conditions and prevent foul-weather from making your skin leathery and unattractive.

Choose a tissue or nourishing cream that is rich and of a rather heavy consistency. One new kind, made by a cosmetician who specializes in the treatment of dry skins, smells delicious and really goes a long way toward keeping the skin soft and supple and preventing lines and wrinkles.

It is to be used after you've cleaned your face and throat, of course. Wash with soap and water and clean with cleansing cream before applying the richer cream.

Smooth the tissue cream from the base of the throat upward to the hairline. Then, using a patting or your fingertips, pat it into your skin. Don't pat too hard, but don't stop until the cream has melted. Remember to pat upward and outward on the throat, chin, cheeks and forehead, only outward from the nose to the ears.

When you have finished, wipe off the excess, leaving a little around the eyes and mouth. If you can't bear to sleep with cream on your skin, wipe off every trace and pat with cotton pads to have your skin soaked in skin food.

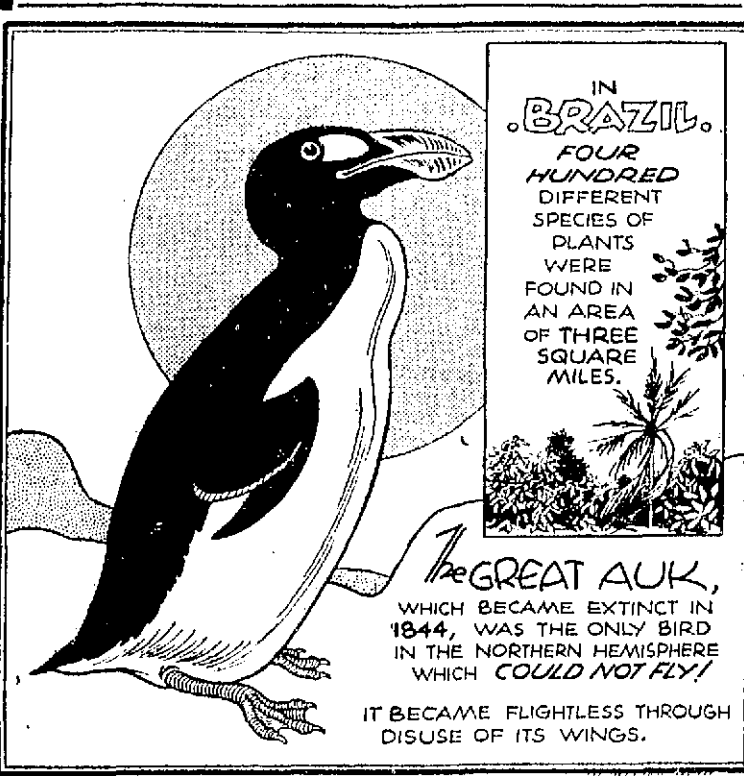

Wind Chills at Hot Springs, S. D., were discovered by a hunter in 1881, when he heard a wind whistling and found it was about coming from a small aperture in the rocks.
